Chart "A" shows three different metering points of the needle, Taper A is the angle of the taper with 1.00 being the leanest, L1 is the distance between the clip position and the diameter of 2.515 on the jet needle, D is the diameter of the needle before the taper begins. (see diagram below)

Jet Needle Selection

- 1) Use chart "A" & "B" to determine which part of the needle is in use at the needed throttle opening.
- 2) If you can go richer across the board from 1/4 to 3/4, go to a smaller diameter needle.
- 3) The taper will change the rate of fuel, depending on the angle. To adjust a high part of the midrange 1/2 to 3/4, change to a steeper taper.
- 4) The mixture richens when the needle jet is raised and leans when lowered. A simple change of clip position, lowering or raising, will allow you to make adjustments. A longer needle will be richer and a shorter needle will be leaner.
